Make plans now to attend the “Bringing the Urban Forest Full Circle” Conference, Friday, March 18, 2016 at Hamburger University in Oak Brook, IL.

The Illinois Urban Wood Team is organizing this landmark event to demonstrate the largely untapped potential of wood culled from the urban forest. With hundreds of thousands of community trees in Illinois dying or damaged each year due to infestation by the emerald ash borer, storms and other life-ending causes, the time is now to put urban wood to the highest possible valued uses.

Land managers and arborists to sawyers and woodworkers will come together to share and learn next-step actions to participate in a market-driven urban wood economy. The conference will focus on industry best practices for urban tree removal and milling through wood product manufacturing and marketing.

This full-day education and networking event will feature more than a dozen informative presentations, a live portable sawmill demonstration and tabletop displays.
